LOXLEY CROSS

Description

The Loxley cross is a pewter cross of Celtic design worn around the Page's neck. In the center of the cross is set a green stone.

Significance

The Loxley cross represents the Page's ever-present fealty to Christ as his Savior and Lord. The green stone represents green martyrdom: it is a humble reminder for the Page to separate from worldly pleasures and idolatry, always fleeing immorality and youthful lusts.

By wearing this cross, the Page conveys his submission and adherence to the ideals of knighthood and chivalry. It is an outward expression of the Page's eagerness to pursue these ideals and the fact that the Page is willing to undergo the rigors of training to become a Knight.
